

We Have a Confession to Make

I have a confession to make. We have been very remiss of late about updating this blog. And websites that contain no recent news are one of my personal pet hates. So...

Why? What happened? I think we owe you, our loyal blog followers, an explanation.

Basically, most of what we predicted in the period 2006-2010 happened, or is in progress. We are in the midst of a deep financial crisis, with governments hanging on to power as best they can. Naturally, the inclination is to print more money. Printing money buys more time, but the powers that be are simply delaying the inevitable... and making it so it will be worse when it really happens.

The drama of the Euro crisis has certainly kept us busy over the spring and summer, though I think in many ways it's overblown. I have no doubt that the Federal Reserve is trying to keep the world focused on Europe's problems, in order to distract from America's problems. Now, with the election campaign hotting up (yawn!) once again the media in the US will be distracted from reporting what's really going on.

All this has distracted us in a big way... because here at Q Wealth, we don't just write about things, we actually do them. I think that has always been one of our strengths – we write from personal experience. But it is also a weakness, in keeping up with the volume of new content that the internet demands these days. It would be very easy to hire smart professional writers to make things up, as a lot of other publishers do... but that is not our game. If I write about something it's because I've been there, met the people and done that.

When we tell you about offshore banking strategies, asset protection, second passports and alternative investments, it is because we are involved in these fields on a daily basis. I help clients through my consulting firm, and I also have other business interests of my own. These investments were designed to pay off in times of crisis, and they are certainly doing that now... thank you very much!

Anyway, the purpose of this posting is just to let you know that we are very much alive and well, working long days to keep up with everything that's going on. We are sad that many people are suffering because of the gross economic mismanagement of our leaders... but at the same time we are happy that the strategies we have always written about are paying off, not just in terms of protecting assets but also in terms of creating wealth offshore. It is in times like these that fortunes are made.

If we haven't posted much to the blog, it is because we are prioritizing our editorial work at the moment towards paid clients, including readers of our flagship quarterly newsletter (next one out soon)

I am off to Panama again next week for Bobby Casey's Global Escape Hatch Summit. I know some of you will be there and I'm looking forward to meeting you. I will then be carrying out some other business in the Caribbean and Latin America and finalizing on the ground research for my new, 2012-2013 Report on Second Citizenship and Passport Programs. This is an area that has changed out of all recognition since the last time anyone thought to write a book about it. I will be in both Central America and in the Caribbean, looking at naturalization and economic citizenship programs.

In October, however, we have great plans for Q Wealth and we expect to bring many updates to this website, including your opportunity to acquire this major new second passport report.

So please keep up good spirits and be assured we are here working on behalf of our readers. You are welcome to contact us any time for a chat or for informal referrals, as many readers often do. Talk to Aubrey, Frederick or Mark in the first instance.

And if you haven't already done so, please be sure to sign up for our free weekly email newsletter, 0 Bytes. We send that out faithfully every week with the latest updates and insider information.
